RETINITIS.

It is Successfully Treated by Dr. A. H. Edwards--The Eye Saved and the Patient Made Happy.

Paducah Daily News.]

New diseases and new forms of those already known to the medical world are daily being brought to the notice, and are puzzling the medical skill of our physicians. A case has been brought to our notice recently which is attracting the attention of the physicians of the entire country on account of the peculiar and characteristic form of Nephritic Retinitis, assumed in this instance.

The eye is the most delicate part of the body and when it becomes diseased the physician must necessarily know what he is doing before he begins treatment, if he expects to save the sight, and especially is this true in a case where entirely new and peculiar forms of the disease appear, and it must be specially gratifying to the physician who successfully treats the first case of the kind known to medical science. In such a position stands Dr. A. H. Edwards, of this city, with reference to the case in question. Dr. Edwards is a specialist on eye, ear, nose, and throat, formerly of Nashville, Tenn.; was demonstrator of anatomy in the medical department of the University of Tennessee, and the surgeon-general on Governor Buchanan's staff. His successful treatment of this case adds new laurels to his medical reputation, as the medical journals of the country will publish a full account of the case and his treatment.

A reporter called upon Dr. Edwards for a short history of this case and gathered the following from him as being the facts regarding it:

"Mr. Arnold, from near Shelbyville, Ill., consulted me four weeks ago in regard to the eyesight of his eye, stating it had been failing him for some time, and that the first time he noticed it was one day when he was trying to shoot a squirrel, and when the left eye was closed he could not see any of the 'sights' on the gun with the right eye, and it was more than six weeks after that that he consulted me, and when he related the history of the case I supposed there was forming a cataract, but upon examination with the ophthalmoscope and with the room thoroughly darkened and the best artificial light I could get, after the eye had been dilated, I found that at the disc, as well as near its vicinity, a white opacity, which was caused no doubt, by the infiltration of the connective tissues of the retina. I also found that beyond this white opacity was a gray bank, possibly caused by the fatty degeneration of the connective tissue elements. In the region of the yellow spot (which is to the left of the disc) could be seen irregular spots, which seemed to be broken off of the white bank which has just been described. The arteries of the retina looked to be much smaller than in an emmetropic eye. The veins were enlarged and very tortuous, which lent a far more red and vascular appearance to optic entrance. There also was seen on the vessels running upwards a well marked extravasation of blood. On examination of the left eye I found it in a normal condition. After the ophthalmoscope examination was over he stated that he had for some time been troubled and treated for kidney troubles, but at the present time was almost well."

After a thorough examination the doctor put the patient under treatment at once, and after three weeks the engorgement of the retina and its vessels had subsided and left the eyesight in almost a normal condition, and with proper glasses he was well prepared for the duties of life.

The Columbia Daily Calendar

remains the only valuable daily pad calendar. The calendar for 1893 is the same general design as that of previous years, consisting of 366 leaves, one for every day in the year, and a calendar for the entire year. The day of the week, of the month, and of the year are given, and on each leaf is a short sermon on the "Gospel of Outdoors Health and Happiness," with valuable hints on practical road making. The leaves are so arranged that there will be no stub left, and each one can be referred to at any time during the year. The pad is upon a metallic stand of ivory-black, arranged so as to rest upon the desk at a convenient angle. The pad matter, which in the aggregate is enough to make a book, is all fresh and new, and is of more pertinent value than that of any previous calendar. The calendar is issued by the Pope Manufacturing Company, of Boston, New York, and Chicago.

"Are you fond of pie?" asked a little boy, addressing a City Hall politician who was visiting the family. "Not particularly so," was the reply; "why do you ask, my little man?" "Because, I thought you must be fond of it." "Why did you think I must be fond of it?" "Papa says if there is any pie anywhere, you are sure to have your finger in it." --New York Press.
